Audio Consultation

From your first phone call with Goodman Audio, the needs of your unique event and its success are our priority. During the consultation stage we gather detailed information from the client for the event in order to develop a quote. We listen to your requirements and then conduct a site survey with you in order to assess the environment and logistics of the facility and to determine specific needs. Next, we use this information along with our knowledge and experience to create a full-service quote.

The consultation phase includes the following:

1. Site survey with the client – While reviewing the site, we assess the location's logistics such as existing power availability, all relative building codes, and placement of equipment. At this stage we can see first-hand how we will use the space to accommodate sound needs for your specialized event.

2. Creative consultation - In addition to listening to you and responding affirmatively to our requests, we will make recommendations, offer ideas, and provide creative solutions which can help you achieve optimal results and maximize resources.

3. Full-service quote – Our all-inclusive quote gives you the assurance of knowing that all details of your event are covered. The quote includes a sound design tailored to your event; all equipment and hardware; delivery, set-up, operate, and strike; and all staff needed to make your event's sound its best. You know in advance what to expect, leaving no room for surprises.
